Draped Velvet Coat

Costume velvet, a material which was made especially for this treatment, was used for this coat. The color is a brown which matches as closely as possible the brown martin fur used on collar and cuffs.

The effect of the collar is that of a scarf of the fur having a single end and held by a buckle covered with the velvet. A similar buckle is used lower down on the coat, the material being draped through it and a fastening made with hooks underneath.

This is a style of garment which has been in favor in Paris for some time and which promises to be well liked here.

EL PASOANS DANCE FOR CHARITY; MANY HANDSOME GOWNS ARE WORN

Conducted by

MISS HALLIE IRVIN

Telephones 2020 or 2040, day; and 245, night.

ONCE each year El Paso dances in the name of the greatest of all virtues—charity. The eighth annual charity ball, given at the Toltel club Wednesday evening as the formal opening of the fundraising celebration, was the most successful ball yet given, both socially and financially. No conflicting engagements were permitted to interfere with this annual event on the social calendar. Gowns were purchased in New York or imported from Paris for the annual ball and the resulting picture in the colonial ballroom of the Toltel club was most pleasing.

More pleasing even than the picture of the gowns, the beautifully decorated ballroom or the restful parlors, was the music of the famous 22d regiment band. For three hours this band played a concert which was as much enjoyed by those who were not dancing as those who participated in the program of 12 dances. Subdued until it sounded like an orchestra, the 22d band under the leadership of E. W. Henderson played perfectly for the ball and its splendid rhythm made the dancing an ideal pleasure.

The decorations, as the picture of the ballroom needed no other decoration, its color scheme, the floral decorations were confined to the parlors of the club and to the supper room, where the center table was artistically decorated with autumn fruits and flowers with red candles in a candelabra on the center edge. Here a light luncheon was served during the evening. Punch was also served from a grape laden punch bowl in the alcove of the ballroom.

The grand march started promptly at 9 o'clock and was led by mayor C. E. Kelly and Mrs. Rowell Loomis, first vice president of the Woman's charity association. They were followed by Mrs. C. E. Kelly and Gen. E. Z. Steever, Mrs. Steever was escorted by U. S. Stewart, president of the Toltel club. The floor committee included A. P. Coles, U. S. Stewart, W. H. Burges, Walter Davis, Henry S. Bosch, Walter Kohlberg and Ballard Caldwell. Mrs. W. H. Burges was chairman of the refreshments committee.

The hostesses of the evening were: Mesdames A. Andrews, W. H. Austin, B. B. Bailey, H. S. Beach, W. S. Clayton, A. P. Coles, J. M. Dean, Lamar Davis, W. W. Goss, J. L. Dyer, J. A. Luck, D. A. Alla Nazimova Tells Women How To Fascinate

By Margaret Hubbard Ayer.

THE other day I went to see Mme. Alla Nazimova to ask her to give us all a few hints on the gentle art of fascinating, or the business of being a siren.

Naturally, with such a subject in mind, I wandered mechanically to the home of the famous Russian-American who has been a different kind of charmer in every new part she has played.

"I'm Not a Siren."

Mme. Nazimova, distant and mysterious, was as merry as a little magpie. It was as if she had suddenly reverted to the vivacious, sparkling gaiety of the Russian actress as she was before she became the unfathomable siren of the American stage.

"The business of being a siren! What a dreadful question!" Mme. Nazimova looked reproachfully at me. "But I'm not a siren! I never 'sired' anybody. People think that you are the parts that you act. Could anything be more awful? When you think that I am actually Bella Donna now and the Marionettes last season! Oh, what a changer!"

"Last season I was the very best the most good, the most pure young person in the world in the Marionettes, and this season—well, the actress nodded her head thoughtfully. 'I don't suppose there could have been a worse woman; she is the wickedest one I ever have acted.'"

"Last season," she went on musing, "I received all kinds of letters addressed to the dear, sweet, Marionette—proposals of marriage, even things. Well, Bella Donna's character will protect me from that this year," she laughed.

"You who have played so many fascinating women, will you tell us what type of woman is most fascinating to men?" I questioned, wishing to get somewhere near the siren ideal.

"Who can tell that definitely?" said the star. "There is no particular type of that kind, fortunately for our sex. Men will be attracted to their opposites, to women who represent everything that they would seem not to care for."

"What would you describe as the ideal type of woman, Mme. Nazimova?"

"A woman who combines a masculine brain with feminine charm," said Mme. Nazimova slowly. "I see a great many women who affect certain masculine traits who wear high boots and queer mannish-looking hats, but such things have nothing to do with the development of intelligence. They are all wrong. The woman to my mind who would be completely fascinating, would understand and retain ideas and thoughts presented to her. But even this is not enough. She must digest those ideas and transmitting them in her own mind and through the power of her own intellect, send them forth again as her own."

"I can imagine that Mme. De Stael, for instance, fascinated all men of her time, and there is a woman today, harpess Berta von Suttner, who, to me, is the ideal of this kind."

"She was the daughter of the Nobel prize winner, and wrote 'Lay Down Your Arms.' Many years ago, whenever she appeared in society, the people that impressed people was her great physical beauty."

"Now it is her charm, her brain, her high and unflattering purpose that makes her one of the most fascinating women of the times. For such a woman does not exist no one thinks about it where she is concerned."

Depends On The Men.

"As for the type of woman who fascinates men, it depends upon the man, and even then, you never can tell. The man whom you think would fall in love with a woman of brains and education, and depth of character, will be completely carried away by a shallow, pretty little ingenue, who hasn't the faintest idea about his work and what's more, he will love her devotedly and be happy with her, as Helene was with his last cook."

"Mrs. Fluke represents a type of the fascinating woman of the spiritual type. There's a brain like a live wire for you can fairly hear it crackle; and in Mary Garden, you have an altogether different type of feminine fascinating."

"And I may add that there is the Nazimova type, too."

Alla Nazimova, who is playing in "Bella Donna," at the Empire Theater, has't the faintest idea about his work and what's more, he will love her devotedly and be happy with her, as Helene was with his last cook."

Parties

A jolly crowd gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Ayers, 1412 North Florence street, Tuesday evening, to celebrate the birthday of Mrs. Ayers, who is soon to become the bride of Barney Hughes, of Mississippi. The guests were of the Young People's Mission Study class of Trinity church and the bride party. The living room was most attractively decorated with pink and white and filled with pink and white chrysanthemums being effectively used. The dining table was covered with a white cloth, the centerpiece being a huge bride's cake. White tulle streamers in the chandeliers, the corners of the table, together with dainty baskets filled with pink and white mints, completed the table.

Miss Lucile Ayers met the guests at the door and Miss Henderson, Mrs. Clark and Mrs. C. Wesley Ward, assisted the hostess in receiving. A guessing game afforded much merriment. It was in the nature of a romance, the missing words of which were the names of cakes. Miss Emma Hoffman won the prize, an angel food cake, while the consolation, a cake pie, was given to Miss Peacock.

As the evening wore away, the guests were startled by the announcement that a telegram had been received at the door. It brought only a message of prize, however, to the friends of Miss Bezie Webster, whose engagement to Robert Hall was announced through the telegram which was signed by Capt. M. Webster. He is also a popular member of the mission study class.

Little Della Miller, who sang "I Love You Truly," to the delight of the grown-ups.

Suited, hot biscuits, coffee and mince were served, the hosts being assisted by Misses Katherine Peak, Stella Latner, Mrs. William Sachs and Mrs. Black Crawford. Little Miss Frances Ayers and Dorothy Danielson and master Byron Weddell passed little baskets filled with mints. Miss Emma Hoffman presided at the coffee urn.

Following the salad course, the bride to be was asked to cut the wedding cake. The "filling" of this mysterious cake was made up of many beautiful gifts. Miss Henderson, who is clad in a white marquisette over pink, and completed a charming picture as she examined the contents of the many dainty packages. The group of friends surrounding the table joined in "heaps of good wishes" for Miss Henderson.

Miss Henderson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Henderson, of 1318 Montana street. Her wedding will be solemnized in Trinity Methodist church Dec. 17.
